	UA98-009-0004	Boots, Caribou	High-knee caribou boots with a strip of beaver fur along the top of the boots. These boots have soft soles probably caribou skin. The draw string at the top of the boots is probably caribou skin with blue and white yarn ends. There are two strips of caribou skin along the sides of the boots in order to tighten around the ankles. These boots are stitched with cotton thread and dental floss. A commercial textile lines the inside of the boots.	Allakaket	Bergman, Lydia	1967	Larsen, Dinah	Donated by Dinah Larsen, these boots were made for her by a woman from Allakaket in 1967. -Displayed in "Hunting and Trapping" Special Exhibit - May 17th to November 30th, 2008. 11/12/2009: According to Elders, the boots are made from fall caribou, as indicated by the short hair and thick skin. This is the best time to get skins for boots as the shorter hair is more durable for boots. AJL 9/11/2009: Examined by Elders for Oral History repatriation project. EAC
